

Shark 5 dictation.

The giant, white duck lived in a really interesting room on a boat owned by the Queen. All he had to do was deliver two eggs each day to keep the key to the boat. His friends - the dragon and the local flock of birds, were always coming round to make the most of the comfortable room.

One sunny day, the animals were feeling quite floppy and tired. "There's hardly any air and the sun is ever so hot!" complained the different animals to the duck.

"I am overheating!" moaned the dragon. Looking around the room, his eyes fell upon an ice box in the corner. Once he saw it, he knew things were going to get better. He pulled it over to the others. "We're all so hot, please could we use it?" he asked the duck. "I'm sure the Queen wouldn't miss a little ice."

"He's right," said one of the birds, "the ice will put an end to our problems."
